There are two important pieces of legislation that govern the use of electronic monitoring devices: HB 1, as enacted by the 2010 Regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly, and HB 463, as enacted by the 2011 Regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly. The information below are those sections of those bills that relate to electronic monitoring devices. Vendors should become familiar with these laws before submitting the required information.

HB 1, as enacted by the 2010 Regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly, is commonly known as Amanda's Law. Amanda's Law will allow judges to order electronic monitoring in domestic violence cases if the suspect violates a domestic violence protection order. This law also encourages the use of electronic monitoring in pretrial release, pretrial diversion, probation, and conditional discharge.

HB 463, as enacted by the 2011 Regular Session of the General Assembly, authorizes electronic monitoring as a "graduated sanction" (Sec 3), pretrial monitoring of medium and high risk defendants (Sec 45), electronic monitoring as part of reentry supervision (Sec 34), home incarceration, and conditional discharge (Sec 43).

The purpose of this document is to provide local officials with a list of contracted vendors that can provide the required equipment and services.
